Dear Sir,

Re: Discussion of R18+ Classification for Computer Games

Endeavour Forum is an Australia-wide organisation of people concerned about the anti-feminine trends within society, among other things. Endeavour Forum seeks to reclaim the rights of real women (whether as wives, mothers, or in the work-force) that have been arrogated by unrepresentative, militant feminists. Endeavour Forum Inc. is an NGO which has special consultative status with the Economic & Social Council of the United Nations.

Endeavour Forum is strongly opposed to the introduction of an R18+ classification rating for computer games, for Australia.

1. The pornographic content of much adult-rated media material is an affront to womanhood, de-humanising and degrading her. An R-classified category will only add more of this material into circulation.
2. The natural family unit, where children are best nurtured and protected, is already disrupted and undermined by the inappropriate violence and sexual content depicted on movies and television, and via the Internet. Yet more adult-rated material can only exacerbate the problem.
3. Children's interests and protection must always be the top priority for a caring, responsible society. Destroying children's innocence, by making adult material more freely available is clearly wrong, as is exposing them to more risk of: a) viewing inappropriate material, and b) falling prey to adult users of violent and pornographic material, and their deviant practices.
4. It is more important to be concerned with strictly applying the current classification guidelines, so that the degradation and objectification of women, and the sexualisation and destruction of innocence of children, can be limited. We need to be attempting to reverse the current trend.

It is vital that the R classification for computer games not be introduced into Australia.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Yours faithfully,

12 3 FEB 2010
